EDITORIAL

ALAMEDA GAKUEN MEETS AMERICAN OPPOSITION

THE Japanese language school question, which has lain dormant in the public mind for some time, has been suddenly resurrected when various protestants, including persons who claimed to be representing the Ku Klux Klan and the Alameda Housewives' League, made an opposition to moving the Alameda Japanese Language School from its present site to its new ground on the south side of Buena Vista Avenue, near Park Street, Alameda.

Whatever may be said against language schools, this opposition on the part of the Alameda group is a flimsy one. To infer that Japanese language school is incompatible with Americanization is uncalled for because it is unfounded. These language schools are conducted in accordance with the law of California. Every teacher on the faculty must have passed a state board examination on American history, Constitution, and government.
