JAPANESE PEER SEEKS HAND OF LOWLY GINZA WAITRESS

Romance Starts at Cafe Little Pine; Youthful Nobility Is Loyal To "Angel Number One"

Tokyo's social circle, especially the younger set, is agog over the announcement that a member of one of the five highest families of Japanese nobility is engaged to a humble waitress in one of the numerous Ginza Cafes. Mineko Kawashima who is in the role of Tokyo's Cinderella, is 15 years old. She is called "Waitress No. 1" by the cafe employer (as all Tokyo cafe waitresses have their respective numbers) but in the eyes of Naomaro Konoe, who is seeking her hand in marriage, she is "Angel No. 1." Despite opposition by all members of his family, young Konoe, who is 25 years old, is determined to marry the pretty waitress even at the risk of ostracism by his family.

The romance started one day at lunch time at the Cafe Little Pine, for the young Konoe has been in the habit of taking tiffin there during the past several months. Although marriage offers have been pouring in from all directions, mostly from noble families, he decided to seek the hand of the pretty waitress and through his artist friends, asked permission of the girls father who lives in Asakusa. The father rejected the offer, saying that a difference of social station is a cause of woe in marriage, but gave in when the young Konoe himself visited the slum and asked for the girl's hand.

According to a writer in Nippu Jiji, young Konoe believes with Lowell that "True love is but a humble, low-born thing, and that its' food served up in earthenware."
