The Livestock Situation

Pertinent Facts on Recent Development

In years past the beef cattle industry in the West has been conducted largely as a range operation depending on the seasonal grass supplies.

Where feed lot operations developed they were conducted along the line of separate business from that of the range cattle producer. In those days the reason for this, of course, was that much of the grass land was not suitable for cultivation and the calves were produced in those sections and shipped to sections where proper concentrated feeds were available.

This practice continues to a large extent at the present time but the tendency on the part of the range cattlemen is toward developing feed lot operations in connection with his range production. This gets away from the uncertainty of depending upon seasonal grasses and the losses which have occurred so frequently from a marketing standpoint brought about by the necessity of moving the bulk of the year's production in a short period.

The coupling in of the practice of feed lot finishing has been made possible to a large extent, by the constantly increasing acreage each year coming under irrigation, with an increased yield of roughage and concentrates at points near by the range producing sections.

Japan To Develop Its Foreign Tourist Trade

Duncan L. Smith Tells of Excursion in Japan

Seattle, June 24—That Japan is taking a leaf out of America's book and is now intent upon developing a rich tourist traffic within her own area to the fullest possible extent, is the statement made by Duncan L. Smith of the Mail Line offices in Kobe, who has just returned here on the 'President Lincoln'.

"The development of a complete motor road network and of electric railway lines throughout the various islands is only one indication of the awakening realization, in Japan, of the monetary value of scenery, of flowers and trees in bloom, of temples and ancient images. Hotels are being erected and equipped as never before to provide the maximum of comfort to tourists from America, Europe and countries the world over. Department stores and curio and other shops are paying special attention to display windows and attractive advertising. Auto camps are being erected along the roads, with, always, an eye to scenic effect.

"Contrary to the generally prevalent idea, Japanese hotels are not filled with missionaries temporarily abiding in Japan until the disturbance quiets down in China. The few who came at first have either returned to China or have come to the United States. There is lots of room for everybody."

School of Sendai have decided to pardon student strikers and permit their return to classes without demanding of them written apology or explanatory statement of their conduct.
