DENVER JAPANESE GIRL WINS STATE-WIDE HIGH SCHOOL ESSAY CONTEST

Mary Otsuki's "The King of Words" Extolled

DENVER, July 2.—(Special)—Congratulations and high praises are today being showered upon Miss Mary Ayako Otsuki, honor student of Arvada High School and salutatorian of her graduating class, who competing in a field of several hundred high school students throughout the state of Colorado won first prize in the recent essay contest sponsored by the University of Colorado.

Miss Otsuki's prize essay "The King of Words," which we are printing in full below, is written with a certain rhythmic charm which many of her friends believe heralds another literary artist among the second generation Japanese of the Coast. Since obtaining the prize, she has been called upon to read her paper before student bodies of different schools and at important gatherings, one of which was an international banquet attended by prominent men and women of Denver.

Association Presents Book.
As an expression of appreciation of her exceptionally good work the Japanese Association of Denver presented her with the novel "The Rendezvous of Mystery" by S. Nakagawa, second generation novelist of Sacramento.

Miss Otsuki has been prominent in student body activities, and her position as chairman of the "Senior Prom," a formal social function, brought to light her ability as a leader. She was chosen to represent her class as salutatorian upon graduation and because of her high scholastic standing she was awarded a four-year scholarship to a state institution in Colorado.

Twilight was just failing when Sally, who had been diligently studying her literature, sat back in her chair. Having studied so much, now everything was in a muddle. As she sat there thinking of the great authors, she thought how grand it would be if she were so wise that she never need study. What was that? With a jerk Sally sat up. She listened and from afar a soft melodious voice floated toward her.

"Great wits are sure to madness near allied
And thin partitions do their boundaries divide."

Where had she heard that before? Somehow it seemed familiar, but before she could collect her thoughts she saw approaching her a crowd of men eachnumbing to himself. Sally wondered where these strangely attired men were. The speaker walked to her and kneeling said:

"None but the brave, none but the brave,
None but the brave deserve the fair."

"Oh, why you're Dryden!" exclaimed Sally. "But where, oh where can I be?" As she looked anxiously about, her eyes fell upon an old man dressed as a monk. "And pray, who may you be?" questioned the inquisitive Sally. No, you can't be Johnson or Shakespeare. Oh, that's right, do tell me where I can find Shakespeare?" Sally looked pleadingly toward them but they remained silent, until the old man said:

"And peyned him to contrefete chere
Court, and were estallich of maniere."

"What's wrong?" asked Sally. "Is something the matter with your tongue? I just can't understand you." She missed the look of anger Chaucer cast toward her for just then a page turned and she was before a castle. Dared she enter? As Sally stood undecided, at the bottom of the steps, she saw many men enter. "I can try anything once," she thought as she silently started forward. At the landing she paused to stare at a large sign "The Door to Literature."

As she stepped into the doorway, the beauty and light of the room dazzled her for a moment. But as she became accustomed to the glimmering brightness, she saw Shakespeare
