In a press interview, Kikugoro declared: "I am glad that sports are becoming at present something that we cannot do without in our daily life. WAY OF UME

A Romance of Ancient Nippon

The Way of Ume. By Edith A. Sawyer. New York: William Edwin Rudge.

The heroine's name, Ume, is Japanese for nightingale. And the nightingale and its sweet song are inseparably associated in Japanese minds, with the plum tree as, for example, are hot tears and red hair among English-speaking people. In winter, the Japanese think of bamboo trees and sparrows in the same way, and the symbols of summer are willows and swallows, while in the fall their poetical associations include both the maples and deer, and pine trees and cranes, as seasonal representations.

The way of Ume is the way of Samurai, that Japanese warrior race of feudal times, famous for bravery and steadfastness in the face of the greatest difficulties and dangers. As her beloved father lies dying, abandoned by Komori, her rejected and ignoble suitor, she hastily weds Hiroyuki, whose own father was murdered in another province by this same villain. Komori, who does not know that Hiroyuki is in the neighborhood, has angrily sworn to possess lovely Ume at any cost, so that she is forced to leave home hurriedly with Hiroyuki, who now has greater reason for fulfilling his vow of vengeance against Komori.

They wander far, the gentle Ume enduring cheerfully suffering and privations for which her sheltered childhood had but sadly fitted her; Hiroyuki falls ill of a fever, becomes blind, and Ume is obliged to stand by the roadside, a beggar, hearing the voice of the hated Komori one day on the temple steps, where he had gone with Ume to pray for the return of his eyesight, Hiroyuki is so aroused that he suddenly regains the power of sight, only to behold his enemy, Komori, reduced to beggary, dying at his feet. At the same moment, Ume's mother appears, and the restoration of their fortunes is imminent.

Touched with the poetry and color of the Flowery Kingdom, Ume has a certain charm which lovers of the Orient will enjoy. L. P. In Boston Transcript.

JAPAN WILL STOP LABOR ACCIDENTS

Government Will Cooperate With League

TOKYO, Nov. 2.—The Japanese Government has adopted the plan for the prevention of accidents to workmen, which was unanimously approved in the 11th session of the International Labour Conference at Geneva.

The decision was reached as the result of discussions at a gathering at the Home Office recently of the officials concerned of the Home, Communications, Finance, Commerce and Industry, War, Navy, Foreign, Education Offices, the Cabinets Printing Bureau, and others.

REPLIES TO LEAGUE

Following is the gist of the Japanese reply to the International Labour Office at Geneva:

1. Japan adopts the recommendation for the establishment of the general rules which hold that each government is morally bound to use its very best efforts to minimize injuries to workmen.

2. Japan wishes to take all the practical problems in consideration concerning the recommendations for labour accident prevention plan: A. Government institutions in charge of the accident prevention. B. Technical institutions for each line of industry. C. Each government to keep records of labour accidents for reporting to the International Labour Office.

TO MINIMIZE ACCIDENTS

3. Japan adopts the recommendation for encouraging the combined efforts of the capital and labour to minimize accidents.

4. Japan adopts the recommendation for more endeavours to be made for workers' education.

5. Japan adopts the recommendation for the following: A. To inculcate primary and supplementary school pupils with the need of accident prevention. B. Same for the technical and artcraft school students. C. To make the principle widely circulated by means of lectures, moving pictures, visits to factories, construction of "Safety First Museums" and in other ways.

6. Japan adopts the recommendation for the preparation of the medical and other emergency facilities in industrial institutions.

As to the question involving stevedores and other sea workers, the reply is complicated and will be formally decided within a few days after discussions between the Home and Communications Offices.

The entire items of the Japanese reply will be completed during the next week at the latest, and submitted to the International Labour Office upon the approval of the Cabinet Conference.

JAPAN'S GREAT STRIDES GIVEN HIGH PRAISES BY NOTED AMERICAN EDITOR

Japanese Labor Makes Move For Consolidation

TOKYO, Nov. 1.—(Special)—Much significance is attached to the action of the leaders of the various proletarian parties in Osaka in passing a resolution calling for consolidation of the two major labor parts, the Shakai Minshu (Social Democratic) party and the Japanese Labor Party, (Nippon Rodo-kai).

Sixty three labor leaders held a conference Wednesday and passed the resolution, a copy of which was sent to the Tokyo home-office of the Japanese Labor party.

San Jose Wildcats Trounce Blue-Gold Five By 21 to 12

SAN JOSE, Nov. 2.—(Special)—In the second game of the season, the Nitto cagers came through with flying colors by defeating the Blue and Orange quintet 21 to 12.

Although handicapped by the absence of the star guards, Jun Uemura and Jim Yamamoto, the plucky Japanese team played well. Captain Tom Sakamoto was the individual star, scoring six baskets from all corners of the floor.

"Toh" Taniguchi, star of the first game, was too closely guarded and was unable to score many baskets, but he played a bang-up floor game. Harry Taketa played an excellent game at the guard position. The line-up with the point scores are as follows:

Forward—Tom Sakamoto 13
Wilbert Nishimura 10
Center—"Toh" Taniguchi 3
Guard—Harry Taketa 2
"Toki" Ishikawa 4

Agriculturally Japan Is a Marvel Says Dr. Grosvenor

Japan's present day progress is merely a continuation of her centuries of consistent development, the logical result of the ability she has displayed in the past to borrow from other nations and adapt to suit her own peculiar needs, in the opinion of Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, editor and president of the National Geographic Society and editor of the National Geographic Magazine, who visited Japan recently.

"The silk industry is a case in point," Grosvenor said. "Though originally it was borrowed by Japan from China, silk culture has been adapted to conditions here and today Japan is the leading silk producer in the world. I believe that she furnishes approximately ninety-five percent of the silk."

"Agriculturally, I should say that Japan has no rival. To me she is the marvel among the nations when one considers the huge population that is fed and the small area of ground under intensive cultivation. The same crops follow each other season after season, on the same small plots of ground, and yet the nation is fed."

Of recent improvements, Dr. Grosvenor placed the roads of Japan first.

"I am not romancing when I say that I think Japan as a whole has remarkable roads, when one compares them with those in other countries especially the very old one of Europe."

"We have done a large portion of our traveling here by automobile and have been comfortable most of the time. The road to Karuzawa for instance, is a remarkable engineering feat."

Next to roads, he mentioned the railroads.

"With the possible exception of Germany, the railways of Japan are the most efficient and successful Government operated roads in the world," he declared.

SET WATCH BY TRAINS
"Why, it is possible to set your watch by the trains. I never have known one to be late. And there are almost no accidents. What if there are more employees than is necessary, a criticism that often is made, of the trains arrive on schedule, if travel is perfectly safe, what more could one say?"

Personally, he declared that he had formed a deep affection for Japan during his stay here and that he had a real admiration for her people.

"I have had the most pleasant experiences in all parts of the country," he continued. "I have met with courtesy, real courtesy; that is not merely superficial, for it is based on general kindness. It seems to me that no one could visit Japan and not share my feeling for the nation and the people."

ENVOY BACK IN NIPPON

Fujimura Tells of Experiences In Europe

TOKYO, Nov. 2.—(Special)—Baron Goro Fujimura, Japan's representative at the League of Nations in Geneva, returned to the Japanese capital today.

In an interview with the press he gave some interesting sidelights upon his work in Europe relative to Sino-Japanese relations. Although there were considerable rumors and expectations that the Chinese representatives at the League will inject the Tsinan incident into the Assembly for discussion this did not take place due to the tactful work of Fujimura, it was revealed.

While in Paris, the Japanese envoy met W. W. Yen who represented China, and had a long talk with him, Fujimura said. At that time he suggested to the Chinese representative that, inasmuch as the European statesmen were unacquainted with the whole Sino-Japanese situation, the solution of the Tsinan incident had better be left to the negotiation of Japan and China. Yen saw the expediency of this suggestion and acquiesced to it.

Fujimura is a member of the House of Peers of the Imperial Diet.
