GOOD ACTING IS FEATURE OF YWCA DRAMA

Grandma Pulls String Proves Fun-Provoking Comedy Play

Before an audience that practically filled the spacious Kimmon Gakuen auditorium on Bush street Saturday night, the several Echo Clubs of the local Japanese Y. W. C. A. presented an entertainment which was chiefly noted for its artistic presentation and a wealth of talent it revealed.

GRANDMA PULLS THE STRING

William Thornton, comes to the town for recuperation, meets Julia Cummings. On the final evening of his stay in the town he abandons romantic flippancy and proposes to the adored one. But it is only thru the aid of the blessed Grandma Blessington that the unwilling Romeo is finally brought to utter the brave words a knee cushions soulfiling gestures of love.

MISS SAKAI STARS

Miss Shizu Sakai, as the "dead" Grandma, deserves much credit for the portrayal of a very difficult role, which she accomplished with much lively humor. Miss Nao Oka, as the handsome William Thornton, was convincing, especially during the memorable proposing beneath the feet of "his" lover.

BARNYARD FROLIC

The first presentation of the evening was the "Barnyard Frolic," enacted by the very talented Little Echo girls. It was a musical extravaganza of much color in which the dancing and singing of the little flip-flopping chicks proved irresistible.

WINDMILLS-OF-HOLLAND

The last number on the program was the elaborate operetta, "Windmills of Holland," played by a host of talented girls of the Y. W. C. A. Bob Yankee, an American salesman, portrayed by Miss Yae Inami, drops in to the land of windmills and disturbs the calm existing among the lovers on the farm owned by the mammoth Myner Herterogenbosch.

Swords at Dawn

"I am. "You are not her lover." And honor bears the blame When brothers come to blows over A woman's bandied name. Gayety has turned to gall; There is no use warning Two mad fools who insist: "We shall Meet tomorrow morning."

CAT TALES

By Pusey. The operetta was directed by Miss
