TOKIO SCENE OF REJOICING BY MINSEITO

Hamaguchi Addresses Throng Gathered In Ueno Park

Special to The Japanese American News TOKYO, July 3—Ten thousand members and friends of the Minseito or Liberal party gathered at the Ueno Park this afternoon to celebrate the formation of the new Cabinet under the Premiership of Yuko Hamaguchi their party leader.

Premier Hamaguchi and each of the thirteen ministers appeared in person before the multitude and gave addresses amid great rejoicing.

Today two members of the Shin-to Club, a heretofore neutral party in the Diet, joined the Minseito camp. Due to the sudden turn of affairs, the Shin-toists are in a state of near-demoralization politically.

Their leader, Takejiro Tokonami, had been regarded as being favorably disposed to the formation of a coalition Cabinet with ex-Premier Tanaka, but the latter's downfall crushed this hope for playing a role in the Japanese politics.

Many humorous anecdotes are circulating here in regard to the recent turnover of the cabinet. Matajiro Kotzumai, the new Liberal Minister of Communication, was completely taken by surprise when he was informed that he was selected for that post.

Sitting down on the luxurious swivel chair in the office of the Minister of Communications today, Kotzumai shyly remarked that he expected Uchiro Hirokazu, Seiyukai's ex-vice minister of communication, to show him the routine of his work.

"At the student council last Saturday night my suspenders broke right in the middle of the floor." "And weren't you embarrassed?" "Well, not very. My roommate had them on—Oklahoma Whirlwind."

HIGHLIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF CAFE LIFE IN NIPPON

Osaka is the city of cafes, says Mr. Toshio Yamada, a journalist, who on behalf of the Fujiyoka, a woman's magazine published in Tokyo, recently conducted a survey of the cafes in the three leading cities in the Kansai district.

Mr. Yamada, however, personally likes the cafes of Kyoto better than those in the two other cities. He likes the Kyoto cafes because of their atmosphere, which he says is peculiar to themselves. They are quiet, and the waitresses are pretty and soft mannered.

Speaking of cafes in Osaka, which he visited first, Mr. Yamada says: "Osaka has far more cafes than any other city, including Tokyo. Most of the more popular cafes are named after the star waitresses they have, and others have famous waitresses and film actresses. The best known cafe are the Kadama (Red Ball), the Union, and the Beauty Theater Cafes, all of which are located in Dotonbori."

"The other night I went to the Akadama Cafe. My principal purpose in making the visit was to have a look at Nami-san, a waitress known over Osaka for her good looks."

PRETTY WAITRESS "As soon as I seated myself at a table in the corner of the dining hall on the second floor, I asked of a waitress who came to serve me if there was a girl called Nami-san in the place. The girl I accosted happened to be the girl I was looking after. She is 25 years old, and very pretty. Although she wore long hair, her face was modern enough to captivate the most fastidious of the modern boys."

"Like most of the girls in the establishment, Nami-san, as I learned from her, turned a waitress to forget the pang of a lost love. "While I was drinking my coffee, I chanced to hear a conversation carried on between a young man at a nearby table and a waitress. "Have you brought the thing you promised me," I heard the girl say to the man. "Yes, I have," returned the man. "Here it is." "The man produced a ring and gave it to the girl. "Thanking him for the gift profusely, the girl tried on the ring, and put it in her bosom."

"I learned from Nami-san that the girl who received the gift of a ring was another star waitress of the place, who had dropped a literary man whose fame is nation-wide. "As I happened to know the man who had been kicked by the girl, I was curious to know the possible motive which had prompted her to throw away such a famous man. "Nami-san said that the girl was so impressed at the overbearing manner of the literary man that she threw into the waste paper basket in his very presence, an expensive gift he had brought for her."

"As I was leaving the place, an old man came in and sat at a table a few steps from where I was. A small girl came to serve him. She sat across the table and began to talk to him in a familiar manner. "The girl then rose, went to the counter and brought back a cup of coffee and a large dish full of expensive fruits. She took an apple and peeled the rind, and gave it to the old man in a manner that suggested they were lovers. "Surely that girl does not like that old man, but his fortune," I said to Nami-san, as I was leaving my table. "You are wrong," said Nami-san. "That girl would not stoop to such a base thing. She says she likes the old man because he resembles an uncle who was kind to her while she was a very small girl."

300 LISTEN TO GOOD-WILL TALK BY IDA

Oriental Music Fete Follows Dinner To Social Workers

Outlining Japan's fundamental policy of "Live and let live," Consul General Morikazu Ida, Monday evening delivered a message of good will to the 300 delegates to the Social Workers' Convention who assembled at a banquet held at the Hang Far Low on Grant Avenue.

Mr. Ida quoted the famous saying from Confucius, "Within the four seas all are brothers," and emphasized the great task of bringing peace and good will to the earth that the human race may achieve its highest mission.

Gathered around a score of tables in the huge banquet hall were many second generation Japanese and Chinese people, who helped to entertain the guests from the forty-eight states gathered in this city for the convention. The main purpose of the dinner was to instill an understanding in these guests of the nature of these New Americans, the second generation Orientals, who occupied a peculiar place in the commonwealth of the Coast section.

Another speaker, following the introduction of the convention notes by the chairman, was K. Nakashima, secretary at the consulate, who dwelt on the possibilities and achievements of the younger generation of Japanese. Citing the many valedictorians among them in the American schools and the singular achievements they have attained in public speaking and leadership, he expressed extreme optimism for their future, affirming the belief that they will contribute something unique to the civilization of America.

Dr. Ng Poon Chew, veteran Chinese publicist, outlined in an interesting manner the history of the San Francisco Chinatown. He particularly emphasized the injustice done by unscrupulous guides who paint lurid pictures of the alleged subterranean life of the Chinese. The mythical opium dens, the crooked and darksome alleys, and the sinister tongmen, who are painted as being the backbone of Chinatown, gave peculiar lure to the tourists. But they, like all exaggerations and falsehoods, cannot fail to bring ill-repute and harmful reaction to San Francisco, concluded Mr. Chew.

Miss Miya Sanamiya, who had been scheduled to speak, was unable to do so on account of illness. In her place Mr. Nakashima gave a talk. Mrs. Edith Terry Bremner, of the immigration and foreign department was the toastmaster. She concluded the program with a quotation, "Your people, my people; your God, my God," as a tribute to the spirit of friendliness which was evident in this international gathering.

MUSIC PROGRAM

Following the dinner there was an Oriental Night music program in the Founders' Hall of the Western Women's Building. Quartets of local Japanese artists gave a classical selection, "Morning Glory," which depicted a romance of Hikaru Genji and Ugawu during the middle of the 12th century. Mrs. H. Suwada on the samisen, Mr. Mifune on the shakuhachi, Mrs. Watanabe on the Koto, and Miss Aki Matsuo on the koto were the musicians.

Miss Dorothy Fujita, a soprano, gave two Japanese pieces, "Nippon no Kochi" (Butterflies of Japan) by Yamada and "Kuruka Kuruka," also by Yamada. Attired in a glorious kimono of brilliant lute, she gave a lovely performance and was enthusiastically applauded.

Mrs. K. Fujimori next rendered the aristocratic "No" dance of Japan. She was accompanied by the star waitresses of this place. She is a dancer of exceptional ability. "You are the most prettiest girl I have seen," said I to Kinu-san, as I was drinking a cup of coffee. The most fashionable cafe in Tokyo has not a girl like you.

"I thank you for your compliment," said Kinu-san, but that sort of complement does not please me. Every visitor from Tokyo says so. "Dimmed by this unexpected reply, I emptied my cup and looked at the ceiling, from which was hanging a cluster of decorated electric lamps shedding crimson rays. "The cafes of Kyoto are quiet although they are doing brisk trade, a peculiar quietness prevades in all of them, a quietness which reminds me of a temple. I like them. "The Cafe Royal is not the only place in Kyoto where a guest can stay for a long time over a cup of coffee without incurring the displeasure of the management. The waitresses generally are courteous and kind to the customers, irrespective of the size of their bills."

Caught Poses

By IWAO KAWAKAMI O girl, with a roguish smile, Who holds a sea-formed cup; Methinks you taste joy all the while, But never drink it up—

Though the waves run high, you must rise To laugh, to sing and play; With wind-blown hair, and in your eyes 'The sparkle of sea-spray.

With set bronzed arms, like swordfishes Ready to rip a mesh, A straggler stands awaiting for the time When his gloves meet the flesh.
