COMMENTS

By A. M.

Two men kill themselves because they are "tired of living." A. M. has been trying to figure out how many times a day we would commit suicide according to such a motive, if such an excuse were valid. The traditional nine lives of a cat wouldn't be half enough for A. M. If it were possible to keep on committing suicide perhaps we would get tired of committing suicide, too. In which case, what would a tired mortal do?—The best answer that A. M. can think of is—sleep—a good rest in bed—not in the grave.

Opera season has descended upon us. To some it will mean a ravishing period of enjoyment for the ears. To a great many others it will mean a time when their best evening apparatus will go bad airing. To wit, see all the lovely pictures of society in their "glad rags." We wonder what the artists of the evening looked like.

Babe Ruth, the king of batters, has opened a haberdashery on Broadway. Newspapers say that all that he has to do is to just be the "atmosphere" for the store to make it a success. It's great to be great. Atmospheric pressure is too great for most of us to be able to do that.

Any excuse will do to start a scrap sometimes. Way out in Indo-China several scores of natives were wounded and several killed on account of some disagreement or another about the Sacco-Vanzetti case enacted in Massachusetts three years ago. Ten to one the natives didn't know whether Sacco-Vanzetti were vegetables or rivers, and cared less. That's the way things usually start.

government policy in the matter of the much needed rationalization of industry.

All phases of contemporary American life need a leadership that sees life steadily and sees it whole.

Organic unity of aim and action is indispensable to a civilization that aspires to authentic greatness.

The civilization of the Western world before the war was a high carnival of competitive standards and competitive procedures that meant an underlying disunity.

The war brought a quick unification to Western civilization in general, and to American civilization in particular.

The peoples of the Western nations displayed an unprecedented willingness to act in common for the achievement of common ends.

It was part of the idealism of the war period to hope that this unity of aim and action would survive the war and bring to fresh guarantees of peace and progress; but, once the war was ended, there was an almost over-night collapse of the common action we practiced under pressure.

The concentration of war was fol-

YOUNG GROUP PLANS FIGHT

Church Notice

(Special to The Japanese American News)

TOKYO, Sept. 12.—Young bloods and hot bloods of the Minseito party are planning to hold a political meeting at the Chuo-cho cafe in Tokyo to have an anti-Privy Council demonstration on September 15.

Responsible high officials and conservative members are trying to persuade the party faction from putting on such a meeting. Executive secretary of the party, Kojiro Murata, is strongly advising against the holding of such a meeting in view of the fact that relations between the Privy Council and the government are very strained at the present time and such a procedure will be adding fuel to the fire.

However, the young members of the party are convinced that the government needs encouragement and that the Privy Council should be led to reconsider. Disregarding the advice of high party officials, it has been decided to go on with the meeting.

Cotton Mill Corp. of Okayama Makes Big Cut in Wages

(Special to The Japanese American News)

FAITH IN PROGRESS

By GLENN FRANK

fusion of the best of both, but the politics of the whole Western world, age of action, seems powerless to lacking coherence of aim and courage to its contradictory forces.

It now leases and now liberates the will of its masses. It tries authority for a time, and then toys with liberty for a season. It makes the individual its main concern for a while, and then suddenly subjects him to the tyranny of the majority.

In philosophy the old dualisms have ceased to satisfy and mankind dreams of new unities, but Americans philosophy, save in the minds of a precious few, has slumped into a socially impotent agnosticism of outlook.

In religion old dogmas have, in many instances, lost their savor and mankind hungers for a religion in which the living experience of modern men shall take precedence over the lifeless explanation of ancient formulas, but American religion is, in the main, a rudderless excursion rather than a realistic experimentation with spiritual and social values.

In politics, democracy and dictatorship are alike displaying unlovely qualities, and mankind waits for a

Asama Volcano Is Showering Vicinity With Stones, Ashes

(Special to The Japanese American News)

TOKYO, Sept. 12.—Asama, Japan's busiest volcano, erupted violently today, sending a shower of ashes and small stones upon Karuizawa, the small town nearby, noted as a summer resort and meeting place of missionaries.

Villages nearer the mountain were subjected to a half of falling stones, which damaged roofs. Ashes seriously harmed crops. Flying fire ignited the woods near the mountain's base. Asama has erupted frequently this summer.

HOLO. T. H., Sept. 12.—The House of Representatives will have one representative of Japanese ancestry from East Hawaii, it is confidently asserted in political circles here.

Democratic leaders of the island have succeeded in persuading Dr. E. M. Kuwahara, well known and popular local optician, to run as their party candidate for the house. The other party candidate is E. E. Marks, a local police officer.

A graduate of the Northern Illinois College of Ophthalmology in 1921, Dr. Kuwahara practiced for four years in Honolulu and has been in Hilo for the last five years. Since his arrival in Hilo, he has made a wide circle of friends and it is rumored among his friends and party leaders that his election is assured.

Thomas Sakakihara, prominent young lawyer and popular politician of Japanese ancestry is being urged to run for the Senate to finish the unexpired term of Senator Akina, should the latter decide to resign in order to accept another post.

The spoken words are conducted electrically and are reproduced in a ray called "ekigansen" which has heat and is invisible. This method of broadcasting is different from the radio in that the rays have to be directed towards a special receiving set. This feature makes it of more use in secret communications than the radio, it is claimed.
