By A. M. Masaji Matsui married Grace Suyama last Sunday. According to the papers, it was a quiet and simple wedding.

At a certain university in Philadelphia they are offering a course in "poise." The course will teach men and women to feel socially at ease.

A ship doctor who steamed into New York yesterday reports that he treated two cases of illness by wireless instruction on his trip from California.

Three thugs robbed the wife of the Chicago mayor. We thought that Chicago was bad enough but we didn't know that it was that bad.

Bird lovers are mourning today because it seems as if the import of bright feathered parrots for Christmas will be banned by health authorities.

The date of the annual masquerade dance to be sponsored by the local Y.M.B.A. and Y.W.B.A. has been changed to November 15 from November 1, as it was formerly announced.

The change was made due to the sudden death of Mr. Kageyama who has been the most active member of the local Buddhist temple.

Miss Shima Matsumura, who is heading the dance committee, promises much hilarity during the night.

THE UPROOTED CITIZEN

By GLENN FRANK

Yesterday I painted a picture of an America gone fluid, by which I mean an America in which men no longer stay tied to one place for a lifetime and an American which men's interests may be scattered throughout the nation and the world, so that their interests may bear little relation to their place of residence.

Greater and greater numbers of Americans lack that informed intensity of interest in government

The uprooted citizen is politically listless.

Some twenty years ago, H. G. Wells sketched the outlines of this growing problem that the forces of rapid transportation and widely scattered economic interests were beginning to put to our fixed political systems and to a political leadership that had inherited its traditions from days when men's economic interests were usually where the men lived, days when men stayed a lifetime in the same place.

We have not heeded his warning, and tomorrow I shall suggest how pressing the problem is becoming in America.
