WARFARE RENEWED NORTH OF MUKDEN

Military Train With Wounded Attacked By Irregulars, Who Were Driven
Off By Japanese Troops

By D. C. BESS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Nov. 10.—Japanese troops battled Chinese irregulars in a renewal of warfare in Manchuria today.

The chief clash was near Chien-chia-tun, north of Mukden, where a band of 1,000 Chinese bandits attacked a Japanese military train carrying wounded soldiers from the Nonni River district.

The bandits were driven off after a battle lasting several hours. They rallied later to threaten Chien-chia-tun. Residents of the town were reported in panic.

Carrid Dead, Wounded

The Japanese military train was carrying 173 wounded and the bodies of 54 dead from the Nonni River district, where Japanese forces were entrenched in preparation for a threatened counter attack by the Manchurian forces of General Ma Chan Shen. The attack was made 37 miles north of Chien-chia-tun, which is on the Manchurian border.

The fighting which began yesterday against irregulars in several districts was reported to have resulted in heavy casualties. Japanese officials estimate 700 Chinese were killed or wounded in an engagement near Hatching, 50 miles northwest of Dairen, where a serious situation existed. Two Japanese were killed. Thirty Chinese were killed in another fight in the same district.

Other Clashes

Other clashes occurred near Sungking, Tieling and Hsingmuntin. General Ma has instructed his masses forces along the Chinese Eastern Railroad to attack Japanese lines at Tashin, some 15 miles south, advised to Japanese officials said. The Japanese troops along the Taoran-Anangchi railroad total about 2,000, considered sufficient to turn back the threatened attack.

NEW COCKPIT OF ASIA

By Willis J. Abbot
In Christian Science Monitor

This Manchuria, which may be destined to be the "cockpit of Asia" as Flanders has been of Europe, is a country of 448,957 square miles, under Chinese rule, with a population of 32,528,400. Geographically a part of it, but wholly under Japanese control and government, are the Kwantung leased territory and the South Manchurian Railway area, with a joint area of 1,438 square miles and a population of 1,199,976.

It may be noted that the average population per square mile of this Japanese territory is 834; of the Chinese territory it is 74. While it is true that the Chinese territory comprises a great extent of uninhabited territory, the great disproportion in these figures suggests, what is indeed the fact, that earnest and eloquent as may be the nationalistic preachings of Chinese statesmen, the masses prefer to live in a stable and efficient government. This fact is further illustrated by the flocking of Chinese into such international settlements as those at Shanghai and Hong Kong.

The climate of this region is not unlike that of northern New England. Its territory is almost equally divided between densely timbered mountainous and broad and fertile valleys. I have traveled for 24 hours at a time through one of the latter which in its level spaciousness and green fertility reminded me of southern Ohio and Illinois.

Blue mountains hedge in the routes for their products. Rice plain on every side, and very few routes for their products. Rice, corn and above all, the soy bean grow in profusion and at the time of my visit the broad prairies were divided into checkerboard fields of these crops. It is estimated that the present value of these crops exceed $500,000,000 annually. Of the export trade of the country, 67 per cent is with Japan.

Preying on Farmers

Politically Manchuria is composed of three eastern provinces of North China. It is governed more or less diplomatically by the "Young Marshal," Chang Hsueh Liang, who acknowledges a very nebulous fealty to the central government at Nanking. Under his rule as under that of his father, before him, Manchuria has been kept free from the outbreaks of civil war which has devastated so many provinces to the south of the Great Wall.

It is generally understood that Japanese insistence on the maintenance of peace in Manchuria was responsible for this fortunate condition. It is certain that neither the "Old Marshal," Chang Tso Liang, nor his son was without desire for military adventure.

While both kept Manchuria peaceful, they conducted campaigns outside of that province which reduced

Viscount Shibuzawa
Passes Tuesday Morn
Founds Daiichi Bank

Word was received by a special cablegram report carrying the news of Viscount Shibuzawa's death in Tokio Tuesday morning at 1:30. The aged viscount had been abroad for the past month and the end was not entirely unexpected.

The life history of Viscount Shibuzawa reads like a fiction page from Horatio Alger. Ninety-one years ago, Eichi Shibuzawa was born of humble origin in Saitama prefecture in the Kwantung district. His father was a farmer.

As a young man of 23, Shibuzawa had attached himself to the presiding shogun's son at Kyoto where notice of his executive ability was first shown as director of taxes. History tells that at this period it was unthought of for the upper class in Japan to install one of low origin into an exalted position of tax director but Shibuzawa "bluffed" his way into the Shogun's notice and his subsequent record could not justify his dismissal even these grounds.

By the time of the Restoration, Shibuzawa's reputation as a business man was well established. He had many friends who recognized his keen foresight. It was with the aid of these friends that he established in 1871 in Tokio the Daichi Ginko which is now rated as the largest and most influential bank in Japan.

As the head of a new bank struggling for its existence, Shibuzawa made many contacts which brought him into many fields. As time went on the bank prospered, and at this time it has branches in the principal cities of Japan.

Shibuzawa foresaw the need of commercial organizations even at this early time. He is credited with being the father of many banking associations as well as the Japanese chamber of commerce.

However busy he might have been in organizing his vast commercial machinery, Shibuzawa never overlooked the cardinal business axiom of good will. Through his banks he has benefited and helped almost every known business in Japan. In fact, he had become a national figure. The late Emperor Taisho conferred upon Shibuzawa the rank of Viscount.

Through his foreign trade connections, Shibuzawa's death will be mourned the world over as he is known as Japan's John D. Rockefeller. His wealth aggregates such a sum that nobody can tell the exact number of millions that he owned. He has been in retirement for a number of years.

Today the greatest civilizing force in the province is the South Manchurian railway, held by the Japanese under a 99 year lease. It came to the Japanese by right of conquest but not as many think, conquest over China.

It was a result of the complete victory of Japan over Russia in 1904 that the former nation succeeded to the lease by China of the Liaotung Peninsula, and the railroad as far north as Kwang Chentzu its present terminus.

Some Japanese Opinion

JAPANESE TIMES—Mr. Hugh Herndon's and Mr. Clyde Pangborn's attitude toward this country after their arrival in America should shame the Japanese who read into the initial blunder of the young men who broke the aviation laws of this country, all sorts of sinister motives. If some of our officials could suspect the airmen of being spies and whatnot, it would have been just as easy for the Americans on their return to their homeland to have read into the action of the Japanese authorities also all manner of evil meanings. Instead on his arrival in New York, Mr. Herndon made, in a radio message which was broadcasted throughout the whole United States, the following statement:

"I think now is the time to clear up any possible misunderstanding about the excitement we caused in Japan by taking photo-

Japanese Help Inaugurate
Independent Govt. at Mukden

By United Press

MUKDEN, Nov. 10.—An independent provincial government favorable to Japan was formally installed this afternoon in the presence of Japanese officers.

Yuan Chin Kai, leader of the Mukden autonomists, was made governor of Mukden. The Japanese directed the ceremony, the Chinese speeches being translated into Japanese. General Miyaki, chief of staff of Lieutenant General Shigeru Honjo, the Japanese commander, expressed wishes for the prosperity of the new government.

The ceremony was extremely simple and without display of flags.

Fighting Ceases

Coincident with the setting up of the autonomous government, fighting ceased everywhere in Manchuria and roving bands of disorganized Chinese soldiers had been at least temporarily suppressed. The Japanese were repairing the disputed bridge over the Nonni River unmolested by the previous bellicose troops of General Ma Chien Shen, who was entrenched considerably to the north of the Japanese position and declared his intention of not attacking.

Japanese Denounce U. S.

Japanese residents of Manchuria were circulating demands today that Japan withdraw from the League of Nations and extend her operations in China. The Japanese Patriotic Association at Mukden criticized the United States for the world opposition to Japan's actions in Manchuria. The statement said the United States was arousing anti-Japanese feeling in China and elsewhere through the League and the Kellogg treaty.

"This is nothing less than a hostile action," the declaration said. Mass meetings were held encouraging the Japanese military.

Gen. Ma a Problem

The lull in fighting for several days was attributed to secret negotiations with the opposing military leader, General Ma, to induce him to agree to Chang Hsueh Liang's control of Tsitsihar, the only provincial capital in Manchuria not yet under Japanese control. General Ma has threatened to fight to the last man, but the outcome of the negotiations, which would avert the threat of fresh fighting on the Nonni River, was entirely speculative.

Florin Placer Tilt

On the same floor the local B team will meet the Placer seconds, while the Florin Shojo Kai will play the Penryn YWBA in the curtain raiser.

KILLS BUCK IN FIRST SEASON

(Special by Cable)

WEST PLAINS, Mo., Nov. 10—An eight point buck, weighing 175 pounds was killed here by Constable Ed Sieberling, during the first Missouri deer hunting season since 1925.

There seems to be a certain poorness in the fact that the farmer paid with paper for his crops, and the soldier paid with the proceeds of these crops, are almost equally below standard in pay.

There is no certain proof of the method of preying upon the hapless farmer is simple and ruthless. The soy bean, chief of the crops for export, is bought up by the local banks, acting for a central government agency. Although the crop is then sold abroad for gold or silver, the farmers are paid in paper which has been steadily depreciating. With the difference between the two the Government pays its colossal armies and prosecutes campaigns—although at the time of the Japanese demonstration there were none under way.

"Hard Luck" to Unite Christians, Buddhists In Joint Social Party

For the "Hard Luck" and Anniversaries' C. E. of the First Reformed church on the "lucky" 13th, Friday of November, the Friendship Circle, the YWBA, YMBA, the Epworth League, the First Reformed church Seinenka, the Intermediate, CE are joining together. To our knowledge it is the first time in the Bay district that the Christian and Buddhist organizations are joining together to enjoy a social evening.

Once again the C. E.'s are endeavoring to recall and replay the "good old days" when a social was a real mixer, and "put it on" as only they could. An evening of gaiety—simple and boisterous—is being planned. A good time can't be missed.

But through all the joyousness there runs the thread of seriousness. The golden threads of understanding and happiness. To know our neighbors and to cooperate and work with them. Concrete friendship and good will amongst the second generation members of the two outstanding religions of the day is the aim.

The social will start at 8 o'clock and as the title indicates the motif will be "Hard Times." So the rule of the evening is to be cords and street clothes with patches, if possible.

The committees are: Decoration, Messrs. Chas. Ishii, H. Takao, Gozo Maeda; songs, Miss Kimi Bepp; games, Mr. S. Saito; "Bread and Water," Miss K. Miura, Miss A. Zaiman.
