GIRL, 6, SAVES MOTHER FROM MANCHURIA BANDITS

Special to Japanese American News MUKDEN, Jan. 26—A story is told here of a little Japanese girl in Hsinmintun, a city some 25 miles from here, who saved her mother from the swords of Chinese bandits at the risk of her own life.

The girl is Toyoko Yonetani, 6, only daughter of a general merchandise store proprietor.

The father, mother and child celebrated the New Year with a simple feast and were having a joyous time on the night of January 4, when suddenly a number of Chinese bandits fired a volley into the house through a window of the store.

The father died instantly. The mother hid her daughter hurriedly in the bath room and then asked for aid by telephone from the local Japanese gendarmes.

When she returned to the bath room, Mrs. Yonetani found her daughter gone. Panic stricken, she concealed herself in a bath tub. On the other hand the daughter had gone to the kitchen to see what had become of her mother. The little girl was at her wit's end as her mother was found nowhere in the house. At this juncture a number of bandits broke through the back door and poured in looting everything they could lay their hands on.

Plans for Mercy Standing at the entrance to the bath room, Toyoko entreated in Chinese, "Please don't kill me." Without entering the room, the ruffians disappeared with their booty. The mother and daughter were found safe.

Mrs. Nagata and her children who lived next door, were attacked by the Chinese bandits and their house set on fire about the same time.

This was the initial J. A. A. U. contest here, but a warning has been issued to those with weak hearts to stay away from the games due to the exciting brand of ball dished up. The lead changed four times, with Lady Luck favoring first one side and then the other.

The crowd was kept on its feet by the nimble, clever footwork of Yoshida, the clever Garden City forward, who gave a neat exhibition of dribbling as well as caging an even dozen tallies.

Shirachi, the local ace, gave the stands plenty to cheer for. His 17 points played a big factor in the victory, some of them falling thru the hoop when they were most needed. The lineup follows:

TAIYO (41) NITTO (35) Shirachi (17) rf Yoshida (12) Iwami (9) c Yoshioke (7) Tunda (5) o Taniguchi (6) Nagano (5) rg Ichihata (7) F Yamamoto (2)g Dobashi (1)g Sub: Taiyo, Sugimoto (3), Yamamoto, Nitto, Kimura (4).

HELLO EVERYBODY! The weather here in S. F. for the past week has been just wonderful. There is that strange, soft warmth in the breeze which tells us that spring is not very far away. Suppose we our stout ship J S C today for a change since it's so nice and warm? Right!

Isn't it wonderful, my sailors and sailresses, to be out in the ocean in our own good ship? Look at those white sailboats drifting by; look how blue the ocean is; isn't it simply wonderful? You'd almost think Auntie owned the whole ocean, wouldn't you?

"Hello, Auntie and cousins, I am Kathleen Fujimura, P. O. Box 793, Auburn, Calif. (Hello, Kathleen.) You know for the last few days Auburn has the most beautiful snow, large and fleecy. (Oh, how nice.) Say, what happened to some of my pen pals, Chiyu Sogawa, Natuko Misono and Louise Oki? I am anxiously waiting for your interesting letters. And, oh, yes, you non-de plumers—Three Mitsuets, Orackie Boerle, Explorer, Siltite, and a great number of others, please reveal yourselves. Of course, we know it is interesting to have fascinating names, but before we are conscious of it our ship will be overflowing with mysterious characters. Auntie, don't you think we should abolish non-de plumers? What is your opinion about it, cousins? (As far as Auntie is concerned, Kathleen, it will do no harm to have what you call mysterious characters in our crew. Maybe they look mysterious with a veil of non-de plume, but under these veils, there's heat warm and friendly hearts.)"

You don't call this non-cousin of yours a mysterious character, do you, Kathleen? Just look at her under the non-de plume of Senorita from Sacramento. Through Senorita's mantilla, don't you recognize the friendly smiles? Now talk to us Senorita.

"Well, skipper, all these lectures on non-de plumers gave me an inspiration so I have decided to go in as one too. Please don't get the idea that I am trying to get someone's goat, but since I'm very bashful and modest, I just have to have a cover over me. Now I will introduce myself. I am 5 feet 1 1/2 inches tall and slip the Woolworth scale at 100 pounds. I am not peroxide blonde, nor a red head, but a plain black headed mammilla. My head is quite large for my body, but somehow, it hasn't the required amount of knowledge in it either. The beginning of my life occurred in this city of the
