U. S. ENVOY BACK FROM TOKYO POST

Forbes Refrains from Expressing Views on Asia Crisis

Expressing deep regret because of his affection toward the Japanese people and because there was more to do, Cameron Forbes, U. S. ambassador to Japan, who arrived here in this city aboard the Matsunohi, Maui, spoke sorrowfully of leaving Japan.

He flatly refused to comment on any issue of the Sino-Japanese question. However, he freely discussed the depression which seemed world-wide. He believed that Japan is as hard struck as any other country.

Shows Strain

The Ambassador showed the strain of having borne the immense responsibility that must have been his during the recent turn of events at the Japanese capital.

He was enthusiastic in his praise of Japanese baseball, having witnessed most of the Tokyo appearances of the Major League stars in their games against the college teams.

Due to his pressing duties, Forbes was heard to complain that he had only time to play two rounds of golf and go horse back riding a couple of times. On leaving the news that his home team, Boston, had dropped the first baseball game of the season to Washington by the score of 1-0, the Ambassador was visibly disappointed.

Just a Crank

When asked about the purported black hand letter that he received which was written on the stationery issued by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha for a use of passengers aboard the Asama Maru, Ambassador Forbes said that it was nothing.

"Of course, there are cranks in every country," declared the Ambassador. "We always send these cranks letters to the Tokyo police. My secretary handles all of these details. The first that I heard of it was when I read about it in one of the papers. I think it was the 'Advertiser'."

"I was treated with every kindness and courtesy while in Japan. The people are very polite in your country. Their cordiality seems to be bred in them. That quality and their diligence is the two things that impressed me most about the Japanese."

Inukai is a Go-Getter

When questioned about Premier Inukai, the Ambassador replied, "Yes, I have met the prime minister many times. He is a very active man, tense. Summed up in one word, he is a go-getter."

Forbes is a scholarly looking individual. His modest appearance would lead one to believe that he was a college professor rather than a diplomat. He is a grandson of Ralph Waldo Emerson.

The Ambassador is leaving Wednesday for Washington, thence he will go to Boston to his home where he will enter private business.

LARGE NAVY FOR CHINA?

Plans for Big Fleet Are Discussed at Conference

LOYANG, China, Apr. 12.—(UP)—A "big navy" for China was given serious consideration by Chinese leaders today at a session of the National Emergency Conference.

Fifty delegates, aroused by continued "humiliation" of China by foreign power, particularly Japan, proposed that the present navy be scrapped and a strong fleet built to replace it.

They also suggested the retirement of all navy officers and training others abroad, meanwhile raising a "big navy" fund by popular subscription and engaging naval experts to direct a five year building program.

The dismissal and punishment of Gen. Chang Hsueh-Liang, deposed Manchurian warlord, was proposed on the ground that he was responsible for Manchuria's capture by Japan. Several delegates left the conference during the debate.

Sino-Japan Parley Is Postponed, No Agreement in Sight

SHANGHAI, Apr. 12.—The Sino-Japanese peace parleys, which have dragged through fifteen sessions since March 24, were indefinitely postponed yesterday despite efforts of Sir Miles W. Lampson, British Minister, to effect a last-minute compromise.

Sir Miles, acting under instructions from London, made what was described as an almost desperate effort to bring about a compromise prior to the meeting of the League of Nations assembly committee of nineteen, which is scheduled at Geneva soon.

Definite Date Falls
Sir Miles failed because the Japanese military refused to set a definite date for withdrawal of their troops from the front lines into the International Settlement and because of China's refusal to sign unless the Japanese were willing to set a date.

S. KIDO WILL DEBATE U. C. PROF. APR. 19

Discussion on China Crisis to be Held in Berkeley

The interest will be further heightened by the fact that the opposing arguments will be upheld by a Chinese and a Japanese.

The Japanese position will be ably defended by Saburo Kido, San Francisco attorney and former president of the Japanese American Citizens League of that city. The Chinese version of the argument will be propounded by T. C. Lin, instructor in Chinese language at the University of California. The public is invited to attend this debate, which is expected to be a most interesting and timely affair.

MAN SHOOTS LONE THIEF IN SEATTLE

Tamura, Grocer, Ends Life of Ex-Felon in Robbery

(Special to Japanese American News) SEATTLE, Apr. 12.—The mewing of a cat at 4:30 o'clock Friday morning cost Ota Kotogang, 27-year-old member of a wealthy Alaskan family, his life when the cat's wails aroused its master, Ratsuku Tamura, Japanese grocer.

Tamura arose, got his heavy-caliber rifle and shot Kotogang through the head when he found Kotogang trying to force open the rear door to Tamura's store and dwelling at 1041 1/2 King st. Tamura, proprietor of a wholesale cash-and-carry grocery bearing his name, is a widower. He and his 7 and 8-year-old daughters were asleep when the cat, acting as a watchdog, started mewing about 4 o'clock.

Grocer Gets Rifle
Tamura arose, looked out of an open window but could see nothing in the darkness. He retried. Half an hour later the cat started her wails again and Tamura heard a noise at the rear door. He got his .25-caliber, high-powered hunting rifle and crept to the window.

He said it was too dark to see, but he sensed a man was trying to force the rear door below the window. Then Tamura pushed the barrel of his rifle out the open window and fired one shot. The man was killed instantaneously, plunging head first down fourteen steps outside.

Calls Police

Tamura put down his rifle and called police with the calm announcement that, "I think I've killed a burglar."

Records show Kotogang served a fifteen-day sentence, starting February 23, for being a disorderly person, and has served a King County jail liquor sentence besides a jail term in Nome. His home was Golovin, Alaska, but he was educated in Indian schools in the States.

Conducted by AUNT PEGGY

"It's been ages since I last wrote, make? It would be of interest to my friends. In fact I didn't write since you have become our Auntie. You'll excuse me won't you? (Course! Provided you'll write often from now on.)

"Some members might be wondering why Lillie Sugiyama doesn't write. In the month of March she went to Japan to study for two or three years over there. (Oh, she says? We didn't know a thing about it. It's too bad we couldn't say 'Bon Voyage' to her.) Also Helen Baba is having eye trouble and is unable to answer letters. Don't you think that'll be nice to write to her?" (Yes. Let's write to her an 'omimaye' letter. Helen's address is c/o C. M. B. Co., Stockton, Cal.)

COMPANION
By Perry Yamaoka
Who is your companion? What kind of a companion is he? I will tell you who was my best companion. It was Tango, a monkey. A monkey, a black monkey! What kind of a companion would he be?

Tango was brought to me as gift from an uncle who has been visiting in the wilds of Africa. He was a timid thing at first but I tried all my efforts to become friends and in the end I succeeded.

His home is in the backyard where my uncle built a place like a chicken yard and planted trees so that he wouldn't die of loneliness for the tree was his home.

Food was one of the easiest problems for us, and Tango took delight in eating the new strange food.

Sport, our dog, took delight in frightening the monkey by barking so that Tango could climb and hide among the leaves. Sport was Tango's worst enemy and never became friends.

Tango and I spent hours together in the backyard in the sunshine. I read to him, he sat, listened as though if he knew the exact words I said, never interrupting until I finished. When it came time for me to leave for the day, he would look at me as if I were to leave for ever and his eyes looked as though he were going through the great sorrow. But the following day he was joyful.

Finally Tango became ill and no veterinarian could cure him, and the funniest thing was that Tango wouldn't allow anyone to touch him unless I was there.

In spite of our great care and anxiety, he left us.

What could have saved him? Maybe if another monkey or some of his relatives were sent, they might have saved him. But how can I tell? All monkeys are alike. Nothing could be done. It's too late.

No one knows but I that one of the best understanding companions is lost. It was none other than Tango, who filled my moments of loneliness with joy.
