VISCOUNT SAITO, PRIME MINISTER, SOFT SPOKEN FATHER DECLARES ADOPTED SON

not allow any one to be so.

"Not Dry."

Father's life appears dry and uninteresting, but we can feel it so.

We sense a feeling of warmth and fear in his silence. Without talking, father seems to understand us.

Viscount Saito has one grandchild,

Momoko, aged five, who entered the kindergarten of the Peacock's

School this spring. Her first comment upon hearing that her grandfather is to become Premier was:

"What is a premier?"

Then, upon being enlightened upon this point, she added, a little crossly, "I Miss Him."

"That means grandpa and I shall not be able to play on th Hayama beach. I don't like it."

"Oh, no," she continued, "often buys presents for me. And he likes to play with me in the garden. If I can't go to the beach with my good grandpa, I'll go with grandma and ma-ma."

The child called up her grandfather at Hayama, and spoke to him over the phone, congratulating him, while a maid held her up to the mouth piece.
